Mrs. Hemphill Ill.

The many friends of Mrs. J. C. Hemphill will be grieved to know that she is seriously ill of pleurisy and is confined to the Jewish Hospital in Louisville. Her daughter Mrs. Dr. McNeese of Clinton Mo. is at her bedside.

"Bob" Arnold In Town.

R. L. Arnold, our former townsman who recently removed to Richmond, was down Thanksgiving shaking hands with his many friends. Bob says he likes Richmond, is doing a splendid business, and is well pleased, all of which we are glad to hear, but his periodical returns show that his heart yearns for Lancaster, and we predict that he will "make his pile" and return here to spend his declining years.

A Severe Loss.

Messrs. Ed. and Ben Hughes who have the contract for the reconstruction of the Richmond turnpike, suffered a severe loss one day last week when a tent which housed their hands was burned. The tent was pitched near Fairview church and in some unknown manner caught fire and was burned before the hands could reach it. Besides the tent, they lost a tarpaulin valued at $40, and a lot of tools and several of the hands suffered considerable loss in the way of clothing.

Depot Broken Into.

On the Wednesday night preceding Thanksgiving someone smashed the big glass in the north door to the L & N depot, thereby gaining entrance to the express room, from which they satisfied themselves with abstracting a dozen quarts of whisky. The guilty party was evidently bent only on securing the means of celebrating Thanksgiving day, but if they fall into the hands of the law, it will prove a very expensive celebration to them. There is as yet no clue to the culprit.

A Great Success.

The play "The Sentimental Sarahs" which was presented by the pupils of the graded schools under the tutelage of Miss Olive Dean, which was presented at the opera house on last Friday night, was a great success from every standpoint. The play attracted a large audience and all were well pleased with the play. They secured near about $80, in door receipts, which will net a neat sum for the use of the Athletic Association, for whose benefit the play was given.

Mr. R. L. Elkin To Accept Position With The Record.

On January 1st Mr. R. L. Elkin will assume the position of Business Manager of the Central Record and will transact all matters pertaining to the business management of the paper.

Mr. Elkin's business acumen is well known to the people of Garrard county he having been born and raised in the county and actively identified with its business interests for many years. He is at present occupying a position with the Garrard Bank & Trust Co., which place he resigns to come with the Record. He is an energetic, hustling business man, as many successful Lancaster Fairs due to his efforts as secretary will testify. He will be around early in the new year looking for subscriptions and advertisements, and if your name is not on our list or your business is not mentioned in our advertising columns, the best and quickest way to get rid of him will be to give him an ad or subscribe for the Record.

Electors Meet In January.

Under the law the thirteen Democratic electors chosen in Kentucky at the election of November 5 will meet in the State Capitol at Frankfort on the second Monday in January to organize the Electoral College and cast Kentucky's vote for President and Vice President, which of course, will be for Woodrow Wilson and Thomas R. Marshall, respectively. The law stipulates that the Electors must meet at 10 A. M. and cast their votes at noon or thereafter. In the event that any of the Electors are absent at noon the remaining Electors choose another, and it was to provide for this contingency that Assistant Electors were named in each congressional district and from the State-at-large. After the ballot Kentucky's vote will be duly certified and a messenger selected to carry the vote to Washington.

Hon. R. H. Tomlinson of this county is one of the electors who will be present on this occasion, and we venture to say there will not be present at that assembly a more sterling democrat than the old democratic war horse from Garrard county, who has been assisting in the fighting of the democratic battles in his home county since time immemorial, who has suffered many a defeat, but has ever come smiling ready to begin again the fighting with renewed vigor.

Supervisors Appointed.

Messrs A. H. Bastin, F. G. Hurt and George Smith Sr. have been appointed City Supervisors to go over and revise the assessors valuation of City property.

John M. Farra Announces.

In this issue of the Record will be found the announcement of Hon. John M. Farra for the nomination for the office of representative in Kentucky Legislature from Garrard county. Mr. Farra has served one term in the lower house from this county and his record is a splendid one, reflecting great credit both upon himself and the county which he represents. As predicted by the Record at the time of his election, he forged rapidly to the front among the Kentucky solons, and was readily recognized as one of the most able members of that body. Mr. Farra's record is open to the inspection of those whose suffrage he seeks, and it is a record of which he may well be proud. He was found at all times voting for and championing all measures which redounded to the welfare of the commonwealth, and exerting every possible effort when his home countys interests were at stake. Mr. Farra voted for many measures, including the anti-pass and the public utilities bill, which went down in ignominious defeat, but it is hoped will be revived again and will meet with a more kindly fate.

Mr. Farra because of the experience obtained at his first session, is better equipped than ever to represent the county of Garrard, and if re-elected, we feel sure will redouble his efforts in behalf of the commonwealth in general and of this county in particular.

For County Attorney.

In this issue of the Record will be found the announcement of two members of the legal fraternity of Lancaster for the nomination for the office of County Attorney of Garrard county, subject to the action of the county democracy, Messrs G. B. Swinebroad and Green Clay Walker. The former is a practicing attorney, the junior member of the real estate firm of Hughes & Swinebroad and a handler of fine dairy stock, and is a sterling democrat, a good business man and a splendid gentleman.

Mr. Walker is a member of the Lancaster bar, and for the past three years has been the editor of the Central Record. Further introduction of these gentlemen to the people of Garrard county is unnecessary.

We wish to state in our own behalf that it has been tacitly, and we might say generally understood, that we would be a candidate for the office for which we have announced, and we had hoped to arrange some business affairs before making this announcement public. However, the announcement of our esteemed opponent has precipitated the publicity of our intentions.

Before the race makes much progress we hope to get out among the people of Garrard county and personally urge our claims to their suffrage. Our opponent Mr. Swinebroad is our friend and brother attorney, and is a high class gentleman, and we wish to give assurance to the public that the campaign will be conducted along high planes, and we shall be fully satisfied with what ever decision the voters shall make in the matter.

Forage Poisoning.

Dr. R. L. Pontius came over from Lexington last week, being called here for the purpose of diagnosing a mysterious disease which had carried away cattle for several of our farmers. He pronounced the deaths as being due to "forage poisoning", the disease which created such terrible havoc among the horses and cattle of the state of Kansas last year. He pronounces the disease as neither contagious or infectious, but as yet there has not been a successful remedy found for the ailment, in fact the germ has not as yet been sufficiently isolated as to give the people who are making a study of the disease an opportunity to make an intelligent diagnosis with a view to remedying the ravages of the disease. The department of Animal Husbandry have a circular in course of preparation on the subject, which we will publish in full as soon as we receive it.

Dr. Pontius says the disease makes its appearance in two forms, one violent, the other apathetic; the former being susceptible to treatment but the latter almost invariably incurable. When attacked in violent form, the animal appears partially blind and runs around at random and its actions are altogether violent, in this case if a veterinary be quickly summoned, he can usually succeed in saving the animals life. In the latter case, when the symptoms are of the apathetic kind, the animal is dull and stupid, the sight is almost entirely gone, the head is drawn and the animal appears almost lifeless, there is scarcely any chance to save it.

Herculean efforts are being made to diagnose and suggest a remedy for this dreadful disease, and it is sincerely to be hoped that they will be successful, for a scourge. He suggests that when it makes its appearance, that other stock be taken off the food which the sick stock had been eating, that they be provided with clean quarters and purgatives used freely; he says further that the disease originates from eating various foods, corn, oats and hay, and is confined to no particular food or forage.

Three negroes, one of them said to hail originally from Lancaster, ruthlessly murdered, shot to death, Deputy Sheriff Hart at Winchester last week, made their escape, and as yet have succeeded in evading the officers of the law.

These negroes are said to have been crazed with cocaine or some other drug. This brings forcibly to our minds the rapid increase in the use of these drugs, especially the former, and more particularly among the colored people. A few years ago this habit was comparatively unknown, but it seems to have spread like wild fire. We do not recall any great crime directly the result of the use of drugs in Lancaster, but we do lament the loss of some of our best darlings as the result of its usage.

The local officers and the local laws have proved inadequate to cope with the growing habit, they have arrested parties for the selling of it and for having it in their possession, they have placed stringent restrictions on the local drug stores, who even without restrictions are loth to sell drugs to irresponsible parties, either with or without prescription, but all efforts have proven unavailing, they have always by some means succeeded in procuring enough "crock", to make them oblivious to their surroundings and to render them unfit for any kind of labor.

We do not think the "habit" is as bad here as in many other places, but it is bad enough and an evil that is hard to stamp out. We notice everywhere in a while the federal authorities are taking the matter in hand, and in the larger cities the local authorities are making herculean efforts to stamp out the sale of drugs to negroes and irresponsible whites, and it is to be hoped that the day is not far distant when concerted action will be taken all over the country which will result in the complete stamping out of the sale of these injurious drugs and will put an end to the debauching of this class of people.

The last session of the sixty-second Congress convened in both houses at noon Monday, Senator Bacon presiding in the Senate and Speaker Clark in the House. After twenty minutes the Senate adjourned through respect to the memories of the late presiding officer, Vice President Sherman and the late Senators Rayner and Heyburn. An enthusiastic reception was given former Speaker Cannon, who retires with the session. Senator-elect James, Leader Underwood, Gov-elect Cox, of New York, and Gov-elect Cox, of Ohio received special attention.

Already bills are being presented, one among the first being to pension retired presidents; but it is hardly probable that many measures will be passed during the short session, barring the appropriation and supply bills which were held over from the adjournment this fall. The session will more than likely be taken up with the trial of Judge Archbold of the Commerce Court and the hearing of the reports of the various committees which have been laboring during the interim since adjournment.

New Citizens.

Mr. Edwin Walker has accepted a position in the hardware store of Conn Bros. Mr. Walker and wife will go to housekeeping on Richmond street in the cottage adjoining Mr. W. J. Ro-mans. Mr. Samuel B. Denny has also become a citizen of Lancaster and has accepted a position with Haselden Bros.

Game Scarce In Garrard.

The hunters of the county are completely disheartened because of the scarcity of game in the county. Whether because of the drought or what not, there seems to be comparatively few quail in the county, and a marked scarcity of rabbits is also reported. Until this year, the average hunter could go out and in a few hours kill more rabbits than he could easily carry, but a good shot in a days hunt this season often encounters less than half dozen little animals. Farmers report their dying in large numbers last winter from some unaccountable reason, and many of them are of the opinion that some kind of disease was prevalent among them.

Filter And Dam Completed.

The filter is completed, the dam is completed and the material has been shipped for the construction of the new water tower. The water after passing through the new filter is as clear and pure as if it emanated from one of the springs high up in the Rocky mountains. However the community in general will not get the benefit of this pure water until sufficient rainfall is had to put enough water in the lake to enable Mr. Herron to wash out the old filter, which will be used for a storage basin, and to thoroughly flush and cleanse the mains and pipes. The mains in their present condition would so contaminate the water that, notwithstanding the fact that it has passed through the new filter, its condition would not be noticeable, and owing to the low condition of the water supply it is not deemed advisable to use the water for flushing purposes until the supply is materially increased.

Pays His Customers Taxes.

Mr. R. G. Woods, the clever cashier of the Peoples Bank of Paint Lick came down Thanksgiving for the purpose of paying the taxes of a number of the customers of his bank who found it inconvenient to get to town for that purpose, and the sheriffs officers were the richer by over $3,000 in consequence of his visit.

The force was compelled to put in the better portion of their Thanksgiving day making out tax receipts for Mr. Woods, but they did not begrudge the loss of their holiday as it means the saving of a lot of time and trouble to them. There is no more thriving community anywhere than the Paint Lick section of Garrard county, peopled by a splendid class of thrifty and progressive people who are fast assuming a leading part in the affairs of the county. The turnpike connecting that place with Lancaster has been thoroughly remodeled and rebuilt and is now a model road; they have just completed a splendid new graded school building which would be a credit to a town of much larger size, the school will be equipped with a corps of the very best teachers obtainable; there are a number of new and modern dwellings recently completed in the locality, and taken altogether this locality is showing a progressive spirit worthy of emulation.

Big New Hardware Emporium.

Conn Bros who recently purchased the old Mason Hotel property are building, in fact they are covering up the entire lot, and when completed will have one of the best equipped hardware stores in Central Kentucky, together with tin, plumbing and blacksmith shop in connection, and what you cannot get in their line from Conn Bros it will be useless to search for elsewhere. They have recently added to their large force of clerks, Mr. Edwin M. Walker, who has had considerable experience in the hardware business and who will make a valuable addition to their force.

Big Reward For Lancaster Negro.

Ben Embury, alias Bud Embury, one of the negroes said to have been connected with the killing of deputy sheriff Hart in Winchester last week is still at large and a reward of $1,000 is offered for the arrest of Embury and two other negroes said to have been involved in the affair. The Winchester Democrat states that Embury was sent to the penitentiary from Bell county for two years for murder and was released from that institution in August 1911. The Democrat also is inclined to the belief that Embury is originally from Lancaster, and the indications are that such is the case. There was a colored boy raised here by the name of Ben Embury and his father lived in Middleboro, where the boy spent much of his time.

Passing Of An Old Land Mark.

The old Lancaster fire engine, Jim Dillon's old "soda fountain", has passed from the possession of the city of Lancaster; Mr. Moynahan accepted it in part payment for additional work done on the water works dam, and will dismantle it and convert the truck, which is a splendid one, into a dray.

The passing of this old land mark recalls fire fighting in Lancaster before the advent of the water works system. The late James Dillon was custodian of this old soda fountain, and it was his duty to keep it "charged", which operation consisted of about the same process as was in vogue in those days for the charging of the soda fountains at the local drug stores.

The machine was always kept charged and at the tap of the bell Mr. Dillon would rush to his engine and with the assistance of a volunteer department, consisting of whoever he could muster to his aid, would dash to the scene of the conflagration, and after much "monkeying", with it, the old apparatus would "go off" to the imminent peril of the clothes of the bystanders, many of whom have suffered the loss of a suit of clothes ruined by this ancient machine, and would finally succeed in saving the lot the burning building stood on.

Mr. Hamilton Will Probably Make The Race

It is highly probable that Hon. James I. Hamilton will yield to the importunities of his friends and will make the race for the State Senate from the eighteenth district to succeed Hon. R. L. Hubble who has announced his intention of not offering for re-election. Mr. Hamilton has received flattering encouragement from all over the district and would prove a strong contender for the office should he decide to make the race.

It has always been the custom for the counties of the district to offer candidates for this office alternately, and it is very easy to see, accepting this rule, that it is now Garrard county's time to furnish the candidate.

Going back as far as the time Hon. George T. Farris snatched the office from Hon. B. B. King of Moreland, marks the last time that Garrard county furnished a candidate for the office; Senator Hubble succeeded Mr. Farris and the succeeding term was Boyle county's time, and that county had an avowed candidate for the office right up to the time of the primary when he withdrew and Senator Hubble was elected to succeed himself, Boyle thereby forfeiting her turn. Thus it is easy to be seen that it is now Garrard county's time to furnish the candidate, and following the long established precedent, if Mr. Hamilton or any other candidate from Garrard county should assert their claims, it is but justice that he should have the nomination.

Back To The Old Days.

The people of Lancaster were brought face to face with a realization of what the town was before we had water works and electric lights and what it would be now if we did not have them on last Tuesday afternoon. In making the connection to the new filter a casting was broken which caused a shutting down of the water plant which necessarily put the light plant out of commission. The break was not repaired until between five and six o'clock and the consternation of the people at the thought of this condition continuing through the night would impress a stranger with the idea that these utilities had existed here since the birth of Lancaster.

Sadler.

Another one of the noble christian women of the north eastern part of the county passed to her great reward when Mrs. Eliza Sadler died at her home near Buckeye early Monday morning. Mrs. Sadler's death was not a surprise, she had been a long sufferer and all measures looking to her relief had proven unavailing. Her death was due to a complication of diseases. Mrs. Sadler was in her sixtieth year at the time of her death. She was a daughter of the late Joseph Simpson, and the widow of Mr. William Sadler who a few years ago was killed by a stroke of lightning. Mrs. Sadler is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Kepp Walker of this place, by one brother Mr. William Simpson of Fentersville and one sister Mrs. William T. West of this place. Mrs. Sadler united with the Baptist church at Buckeye in her early girlhood and all her life had been a consistent member. After funeral services by Rev. O. P. Bush, her remains were placed at rest in the cemetery at Buckeye at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Follows The Bent Of His Early Training.

To a man whose younger days were spent upon the western plains, who went to rest at night with the pommel of his saddle for his pillow and the blue firmament for a covering, who many times rode from Texas to Wyoming horseback, the stuffy confines of a Pullman car would prove too confining. Such was the early life of Dr. J. J. Pursley, "Dakota Jack" our local herbalist, and when he first contemplated a southern trip his thoughts naturally turned to the faithful broncho who had three times covered with him the great distance from the southern confines of Texas to the extreme northern border of Wyoming, but in view of the immense amount of his stock in trade which he would necessarily be compelled to take with him on his southern tour, he was compelled to discard the idea of making the trip on horseback. He adopted as the next best expedient the idea of driving through in a vehicle, and procuring a buck board and two thoroughly seasoned bronchos, accompanied by his musician Mr. Bailey Briscoe, and with a goodly supply of his wares securely fastened to the rear of his vehicle, Dr. Pursley took his departure for the land of sunshine and flowers, there to remain until the warm breezes of Spring again warm the earth of his dearly beloved native state Kentucky.

Dr. Pursley's objective point was Atlanta Ga. and by the devious route which he will of a necessity be compelled to take, he will travel near a thousand miles before reaching there. Before his return he expects to visit besides Georgia, Florida and North Carolina, and to introduce his remedies in the leading towns and cities of these states. He will be joined by Mrs. Pursley soon after the first of the year and she will remain with him until his return to Lancaster in the Spring. Dr. Pursley's unique manner of vending his wares, his open air concerts and the interesting lectures which he gives attract him a crowd wherever he goes, and he asks but a trial of his remedies, for once tried they readily prove their efficacy and attract him many other customers, and his second visit to a town is always hailed with delight.

Dr. Pursley is a clever gentleman and he holds the respect of every citizen of this his adopted county, and everyone is ready to endorse any statement he may make.

Who Owns The Park?

The case involving the ownership of "the park" in the center of the public square, which has been pending in the circuit court for some time, was submitted to Judge Hardin on Tuesday and he will probably render a decision in the matter before the ending of the present term of court.

The Farmers Union of Garrard Co. will hold their regular county meeting at the court house in Lancaster, Ky., Thursday Dec. 12th, 1912 at 10 o'clock for the purpose of electing officers for the following year and other important business.

State Secy Treas R. L. Barnett will speak at one o'clock P. M. on the same date. All members are requested to attend this meeting.
J. B. Lawson, Co. Secy Treas.
A. J. Rice, Co. Pres.

A Clever Gentleman.

Mr. J. B. Greer of Pittsburgh, Pa., head of the Greer Filter Mfg. Co. of that city is indeed a hustler. Mr. Greer came here last summer and saw the predicament the city was in in regard to the disposal of the water works bonds. He immediately set about the task of placing these bonds, which he quickly did, at par. He then came before the city council when bills were opened for the improvement to the plant and succeeded in securing the contract for the filter. It was natural to suppose we had then seen the last of Mr. Greer, but when the time came to install the filter, lo and behold, who should don a suit of overalls and do the major portion of the work but Mr. Greer himself. And a splendid job he has made of it.

Spend Your Money At Home.

Notice the advertisements of home merchants in the issue of the Record. Note the prices on reasonable goods. Where can you beat these prices? You surely cannot beat them. A good season has placed the farmer in a position to put his tobacco on the market. What a pity we have not a market at home for ALL of it. But when you market your tobacco away from home, remember that your home is in Garrard county, their interests are your interests. Remember that when you want money, it is to your home banks and your home people you go to for it. When you want credit or accommodation, it is to your home merchant and your home people you go to for it. They have carried and accommodated you when you did not have a tobacco crop to place on the market. Then remember that your home bank wants your deposit, your home merchant wants your trade; and above all remember the splendid inducements you are offered in the way of bargains at home. Then put your check in your pocket, bring it home and deposit in your own bank and make your purchases in your home county where lies all your interests.

Cotton.

After a long and painful illness, Mr. John Cotton died last night at the Danville Hospital. For several years Mr. Cotton has suffered from kidney trouble. During the past month his strength rapidly left him, and the end was not unexpected. Mr. Cotton was a native of Boyle county, and has long been a prominent and highly respected citizen. He is survived by his wife, who was a Miss Walker, of Garrard county. Also by two daughters—Mrs. Ed. Collier, of Memphis, and Miss Annie Cotton. Mr. Cotton was a brother of Mrs. George Banzhaf, Mrs. Joe Crowder and Mrs. Cowherd, of St. Louis. He was a member of the First Presbyterian church and an honorable, upright citizen highly thought of by all who knew him. He was sixty years of age. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon, at two o'clock by Dr. E. M. Green, followed by interment at Bellevue cemetery.—Danville Messenger.

Mr. Cotton was well known and had innumerable friends in this county, having married a sister of Mesdames W. O. Rigney and B. F. Hudson. A number of people from this place attended his funeral in Danville on last Saturday afternoon.

"Some Pumpkins".

At Ed Caines corn show there was four pumpkins which weighed in the aggregate 287 pounds, the largest one weighing 92 pounds. Not as large as the one Uncle Eph Leavell brought in last year, but some pumpkins nevertheless.

No Fireworks Xmas.

The City Council at their regular meeting on Monday night passed an ordinance prohibiting the sale or discharge of fireworks within the city limits during the coming holiday season, or at any other time.

Much Needed Rain.

Rain began falling Tuesday night, and by noon Wednesday the county was rejoicing over a splendid tobacco season, and the farmers are now bending every energy toward getting their crops stripped out and on the market before the coming of the Xmas holidays.

Circuit Court.

The circuit court has been busy with civil matters all of this week and Judge Hardin is rapidly clearing up the civil docket.

The case of the Commonwealth against Thomas Ralston charged with the killing of George Finley at Paint Lick, which was set for last Monday, was passed until Wednesday of next week because of the illness of Mr. A. B. Estridge, an important witness for the commonwealth. Mr. Estridge informed the court that he thought, he would be able to be here on next Wednesday.

Mr. Burton Very Busy.

Mr. W. B. Burton tells us that up to the present time he has shipped to his firm in Wilson N. C. ten car loads of horses and mules, twice as many as he has ever shipped before this early in the season, and that he will continue his shipments until well up in the month of February. Mr. Burton reports the following recent transactions in live stock. At Richmond county, one pair 5 year old work mules $375, one 6 year old mare mule for $205, and a 5 year old harness horse for $160; of J. H. Baughman Stanford, two 5 year old mare mule for $440; of R. L. Hubble one 5 year old mare mule for $210; of J. L. Francis one 5 year old harness horse for $120, of J. B. Leavell one 5 year old harness horse $150, one cotton mule for $150, and of a Danville party one harness horse for $160.

Judge Puryear Making Splendid Impression.

It did not take Judge E. V. Puryear long to demonstrate to the Garrard county bar and the public in general that he had in him the making of a splendid Commonwealth's attorney, and that he proposed to conduct the affairs of that office to the entire satisfaction of everyone and to the advantage of the Commonwealth which he represents. He took up the reins of his duties like an old timer, and went through the routine of his duties as if he had been accustomed to them all his life. He has made several extemporaneous speeches during the present term of court which have won the plaudits of all who heard them, and much favorable comment has been heard, both as to his qualifications as an officer and as a gentleman.

The Senatorial Fight.

The fight as to who shall wear the senatorial toga of William O. Bradley after the expiration of his term promises to be a warm one, and the indications are now that there will be a full field and no favorites. Ex-Governor J. C. W. Beckham has already announced, while it is almost a certainty that Hon. Owsley Stanley and Congressman Dave Smith will have a try for the place, while Gov. McCreary and the "Sage of Woodford", Hon. J. C. S. Blackburn, are spoken of as probable candidates. However it is exceedingly doubtful if either of the latter two named gentlemen will offer for the place.

Messrs Beckham, Stanley and Smith each have a strong following and the race between these three would indeed be a pretty one.

WHITE GIRL'S WAY

Kit Landers' Methods Differed

From Those of Her Red

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

Kit watched the preparations down at the corral warily. They could go as far as they liked. She flatly refused to act as guide for any lot of tenderfoot easterners. After four weeks of watching them ramble all over the landscape, she felt there was a limit.

"They want to see the Bottomless Pool, Kit," said her father, casually. "Saddle up, I'm too busy to go alone."

"Wish they were all in it this minute," Kit retorted pleasantly, squaring her feet in the low doorway. "I won't go, dad. Send Dave."

Landers turned around to look at her face. "You cut out that jealous streak, girl, and go saddle up. Now, don't stop to talk, 'cause I've got eyes. Dave's been bawling and skydoodling around the little blonde, and you've started bawling over it. Don't let her know you give a rap, Kit."

"I don't," Kit said, slowly. "I don't care what he does, only I don't want to be around at her beck and call." She went swinging down to the corral, chin up, full of plain fight, and the old rancher chuckled. When Kit showed fight, even the wolf dogs around the place slunk down behind the wagon sheds.

Miss Harriman was standing by Dave, laughing at some remark of his as he cinched up her saddle straps. Kit's eyes gazed serenely by them both. Her faithful old corduroy skirt was certainly worn and seedy beside the new khaki riding outfit of the eastern girl. Her brown hair was bound about her head in two wide bands, topped by an old broad brimmed felt hat she loved. She whistled to her own pony, and went to get her saddle and bridle from the pegs. And Dave followed her.

"I don't want you to take this trip with them, Kit," Miss Harriman says it's too dangerous for a girl to act as guide."

"Does she?" Kit's tone was cheerful and even. She slipped the bridle up over Brimstone's eager nose. "Well, I'm going just the same. If Miss Harriman's afraid, she can stay behind with you and dad."

"I'm going along," Dave sidestepped as the pony lifted one hind leg and kicked back. "I wouldn't take Brimstone, Kit."

"Say, Dave Kitteridge, are you trying to boss me?" She lifted a flushed face to his, but Dave smiled back. "You need it. Anybody got a better right?"

Whereupon Kit acted precipitately and without any sense of humor. Straight across the face she struck him with the full force of her palm, and it was a strong, tanned little hand that delivered the blow. Miss Harriman gave an involuntary gasp as she saw it descend, and one of the other men laughed. But Dave had not worked on the Landers ranch for two years without becoming fairly well versed in the ways of Miss Landers.

He never even noticed the swift little slap, but took hold of the bridle, and turned Brimstone away from her. And Kit stood with clenched fists as he calmly unbuckled the bridle straps, sent the pony back to the end of the corral, and saddled up Quita, a safe little bronco with a snub nose and steady eye.

Very courteous he was to her, with an understanding touch of tolerant kindness, as of one who knew her well, but Kit watched him from under long lashes when he helped Rosemary Harriman into her saddle, and she could have ridden them both down under Brimstone's stamping, dancing feet.

She did not look behind at him, nor wave goodbye, as the line of ponies took the up trail towards the pines that fringed the rough sandstone buttes. Miss Harriman was near her, and Kit's lips shut in a firm line as she listened to her.

"It seems so strange to meet a splendid fellow like Dave Kitteridge way out here in the wilds. You know he does not seem to belong some way, is he a westerner?"

Kit pointed south. "Born right over yonder at the next ranch."

"Really? Where was he educated?" "Same place. I was—Broken Arrow district, eleven miles from here. Dave and I used to ride it."

"Yes, he told me you were just like a dear little sister to him." Kit's hand gripped the reins, and Quita reared for a moment at the tension. "But no college training."

"We went up to Sundance first for the high school course, and then down to Laramie to the state college."

"Together?"

"Yep, always together, just like brother and sister," retorted Kit, calmly. "Are you taking a personal interest in Dave, Miss Harriman?"

Rosemary's lips curved in a little smile. "I don't know for sure. He's such a splendid big boy, and I love your west."

"Would you love it winters? Would you love it when it was bleak and dreary and you didn't always know whether there would be any tomorrow? Because that's half of life up here, the cold and bleakness and hard times. And it's half of Dave's life, too. The woman who cares for him enough to marry him mustn't mind the hard knocks, too."

"Perhaps he would like to go east. He talks that way when I have told him about all the chances there."

"Perhaps he would. One thing you can be sure of, Miss Harriman, anything Dave really wants to do, he'll do. I mean without extra coaxing."

"You think I've coaxed him?" snarled Rosemary, mischievously. "Coaxed him? You've been trying to rope him ever since you landed here. But I don't want to talk about it, please."

There came the thud of hoofs on the ground behind, and Dave pulled up short, his pony's neck wet and frothy.

"Just thought I'd come along," he said. Kit knew he doubted her ability as guide. Did he think she would deliberately injure or endanger the life of this girl whom he seemed to care for? Almost recklessly she rode ahead of them, leading the way up the rocky climb, and out along the broad plateau towards Bottomless Pool. It was an old Indian haunt, the strange, dark pool of black water in the heart of the upland forest. Rocks surrounded it on every side. The birds and animals would not drink there, even the flowers and ferns refused to grow about it. The legend said it had no bottom.

"Somebody died here, of course, didn't they?" asked Rosemary, when they all stood around the pool. She leaned over, dropping bits of rock below. The ponies stood together, Kit holding their bridles. Dave took her place.

"Miss Landers knows the story," he said. "You tell them, Kit."

"An Indian girl pushed her sister down there and jumped after her," Kit told them briefly, curtly. "They both loved the same brave."

"Which one did he love?" asked Rosemary, dreamily. She was bending far over the rock staring down at the still pool. There came a curious grinding noise, and tearing of roots, and rending of branches, and the great rock gave way, carrying her down with it. Almost before her body had struck the water, and gone under, Kit went after her.

Dave caught the cries and shouts. One of the men stumbled towards him, and blurted out the facts. The westerner threw him the bridle ends, and ran, his lariats ready for use. As Kit's face rose to the surface, she shook her wet hair like a terrier, and took in a deep breath.

"I've got her, Dave," she called up. "Throw the rope."

Rosemary was unconscious. Kit slipped the rope around her neck, and balanced her as Dave drew her up. "Hurry up, my boots are heavy," she said. Dave handed the rope to the other men to haul on and went down over the rocks like a sure footed goat.

"Swim here, girl," he called to her. Kit obeyed. Her heavy skirt was dragging her down, but she went forward overland, and he caught her wrists, and drew her up out of the pool they called Bottomless.

Just for a minute he held her before the others reached him, held her in his arms, his face pressed close to hers.

"What did you jump in for, girl dear?" he whispered. "When you knew what you were to me."

"Because we're white, Dave," she said, smiling back at him. "And I thought you cared for her."

Financial Loss by Tuberculosis. Based on figures of population and mortality furnished by the United States bureau of the census, it is estimated by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis that not less than 100,000 children now in school in the United States will die of tuberculosis before they are eighteen years of age, or that about 7,000 of these children die annually from this one disease. Estimating that on an average each child who dies from tuberculosis has had six years schooling, the aggregate loss to this country in wasted education each year amounts to well over $1,000,000. This loss and much of the incidental suffering could be materially decreased if open air schools or classes for these children and those who are sickly and anaemic were provided. The National Association estimates that there should be one such school for every 25,000 population, especially in cities.

Eating Dead Horse. An extraordinary scene took place the other day, according to The Vorwarts, in the little village of Maerzdorf, in Silesia, where food scarcity is at its worst. A local carrier was on his way to the station when his old horse fell dead in the shafts. The animal was dragged aside on to the common, skinned and preparation made to burn the carcass. But before the carrier and his man could finish these preparations a number of laborers arrived and with jack-knives proceeded to strip from the bones every atom that could be considered edible. Long before the local police had time to intervene the horse meat was all distributed and the laborers gone with their booty.—Berlin Dispatch to London News.

Why Not? "Madam, you wear too much false hair. It injures the nerve centers and fatigues the blood cells of the brain."

"Young woman, what do you mean by such impertinence?"

"Hotty, toly, now. I'm the welfare inspector for the idle rich."

Big Fan. A small boy from Chicago who was sent to the country by the United Charities and who had never seen a windmill before exclaimed: "Say, mister! That's some electric fan you've got out there cooling the hogs."—Argonaut.

The mop is easily cleaned by washing and then renewed by putting on a few drops of O-Cedar Polish.

ONCE KEPT A DAIRY

By KENNETH JONES.

"Why are you so worn and weary-looking?" inquired the little stenographer as she turned toward the bookkeeper and scrutinized him carefully before opening her desk for the day. "Did you ever keep a diary?" asked the bookkeeper by way of reply.

"Oh, you poor man!" exclaimed the little stenographer, understandingly. "Some one found it, of course."

He nodded and sighed.

"Of course, I might try to comfort you by saying we all learn by experience and there's nothing that time doesn't heal and such things, but I won't. It's all just so much rubbish to the person you try to comfort. So I'll just admit that it's a perfectly awful scrape. I can see that some one has found it who oughtn't to know."

"My kid brother," explained the bookkeeper, laconically.

"What! As bad as that?" exclaimed the little stenographer, horrified.

"It's one I kept quite a while ago—and I'd forgotten it," began the bookkeeper, brightening up at the prospect of unburdening his mind and gaining sympathy.

"I noticed for two or three days that Bill was grinning at me in a mysterious way and this morning he made known the secret. He found it in an old coat pocket up in my closet. I used the pocket as a hiding place, and haven't had that coat out in ages to go through the pockets."

"You see," he went on, "I kept that diary when I had an awful case of undying love for a girl, and, of course, it's all about her. When I see her coming now I make a bee line for the next corner and turn the other way. Why, I never even want to meet any one with her first name. But my present feelings didn't influence what I wrote in that diary—not a bit!"

"When it happened I was ashamed of going with any girl and I kept it all a secret, telling the folks at home that I was going to be out with some of the fellows when I went to see her. And as the diary wasn't dated—for I considered that unnecessary—there's no proof that the whole thing isn't of present standing!"

"Bill called me aside today and whispered audibly, so the whole family heard: 'Have you written in your diary this morning?' When I looked my surprise—for, of course, the truth didn't dawn on me for a second—he laughed and pulled out the little red leather book! That brought it all back with lightning speed. Then he darted out of the door before I could get hold of him."

"The family began to make inquiries. Soon Bill put his head in at the window and said he wanted to speak to me a minute. When I refused he called out: 'Oh, well, I'll just read a page from this little red book to amuse the family.' So he began to shout some silly trash about Mildred. I rushed out hurriedly to buy him off."

"But he won't be bought off. That is, not once for all. He demanded $1 this morning, because his roller skates need to be put into condition. I've always thought 10 cents too much for him, so you can imagine that the dollar came hard! But he wouldn't part with the book, and although I begged him all morning until I left to give it to me he simply thought up schemes for levying blackmail."

"I don't dare trash him and take away the book, because he's quoted so much of it from memory that I know he's got it all by heart, and he'd repeat it with interest if given half a chance. If he did, of course, I couldn't disprove it, without showing the original!"

"And to think it was about Mildred! Why, she's putty-faced and has the disposition of a poodle, and she hasn't any more style than I bag of potatoes, and—oh, she's absolutely the limit! Bill would go and read the whole thing to her in a minute if he took the notion. I don't know how I'm going to exist! I'm totally in his power, and it means ball games even when I have previous engagements! It means taking him along in the evenings if he wants to go! It means a thousand trials that will make death a blessed thing to contemplate!"

"Why on earth do people make such fools of themselves? What good did it do me to keep that horrible diary, anyway? I never read it over, and it makes me hot to think of the good summer hours I wasted writing the stuff just to amuse Bill!"

"But why don't you let him do his worst?" asked the little stenographer.

"It'll only make Mildred know you did care once—and she knows you don't now. And you don't care if your family knows that you've got over your foolishness!"

"Yes," bitterly responded the bookkeeper, "and Bill would hesitate only about five minutes before he'd take it over to Grace, and then—"

"Oh!" The little stenographer shook her head. "Perhaps you'd better hurry and elope with Grace," she suggested as she began cleaning the keys of her typewriter.—Chicago Daily News.

Stone Microbes.

The decay of building stones, according to more than one authority, is not due to wind action or other surface influence, but to internal distintegration resembling wood rot, and this is ascribed by some to a low organism like the fungi and the molds that cause the decay of vegetable substances.

A cure has been found for the stone disease, or at least a form of treatment that diminishes its ravages. The stones are treated with germicides, the best of which appears to be a mixture of sulphate of copper solution with bichloride of mercury and creosote.—Harper's Weekly.

Sapinsky's Inaugural Sale

Louisville's most magnificent Men's store throws open its doors for the first time on Saturday, December 7th. This store has been commented upon generally as the most magnificent men's institution in the South. Expecting to be ready with our inaugural at least three months ago, and being delayed by causes beyond our control, we are now forced to an immediate disposal—a "House-cleaning"—at the very inception to our business. Rather than carry over any stock, we determined to give to the people of this vicinity, the most remarkable values in the clothing history of Kentucky. You will save much more than your car fare by visiting this great sale.

$100,000 STOCK MUST BE SOLD QUICK.

Read What You Get For The Money.

Take your unrestricted choice of every $10 and $12 men's suit and overcoat in the store. All brand new goods. Nothing old or shabby. $8.50 at the late season price of $13.50.

The "Live Store" is to be known throughout this section of the country as "The home of Kuppenheimer Clothes." In the inauguration of a new establishment where these fine garments were to receive their just recognition The House of Kuppenheimer did himself proud in selecting extra fine models for this sale. Accordingly here we show now at the $13.50 price, several hundred genuine Kuppenheimer-made suits and overcoats in all the season's most fashionable fabrics, together with the best products of other highly regarded makers. Kuppenheimer Clothes have never been sold on earth before at such a price. We need not argue with you when we say that you may now have your selection of several hundred of these brand new garments, tailored for this Fall's trade, now priced regardless of profit, and with the sole idea of reducing this stock. All this lot is special at the "late-season" price of $13.50.

Of course, you know just as well as we do that we cannot sell you $30 or $40 clothes for $16—nobody can. Furthermore, as far as we are concerned, you can always trust us not to make an exaggerated statement. However, here are exactly 162 suits and overcoats from The House of Kuppenheimer market in this stock early in the Fall, to sell for $20. You will find practically every new model; all the high-grade fabrics. Shawl collar coats; great coats; belted-belt coats; two button English suits; double toned fabrics; all pure wool and guaranteed both by the maker and by us. While this one lot lasts, special at the "late-season" price of $16.00.

You'll never again find such thoroughly high-grade garments as we are offering now for $19. This price scarcely represents the wholesale maker's cost. We would much rather have $19 for them now than to carry them over until another season and then sell them at this price or less. We give you the most wonderful of values in Kuppenheimer's best $25 suits, and by so doing, cement friendships for this "Live Store". We can't adequately describe them here, but be on hand during the sale and put us to the test of proving that every $25 suit and overcoat in this stock is now special at the "late-season" price of $19.00.

Throughout the entire stock similar reductions prevail. With guarantee to save you at least 25 per cent. Visit us and learn of the live, up-to-date methods characterizing this "Live Store". Money back on request. No one urged to buy.

MATTER OF ADVICE

Young Lawyer Secures an Interesting Case in an Unusual Manner.

By JOANNA SINGLE.

Elwood Pierce lay at full length on the fallen leaves under a great tree in the September woods and wondered whether, summer over, his law practice would not begin to pick up a bit. The season was dull, and he had so little work that he would hardly have recognized a real case if he had met it on the street. The young man tossed his smooth hair with an impatient hand, and decided that he would like to be counsel in a really interesting case—something that would make him sit up and take notice mentally.

Unusually enough, his father and his grandfather had made the money question of secondary interest. What he wanted was to get on in his profession.

From the lake came girl-voices in laughter—voices from which he had fled. Knowing his weakness and his determination not to be caught until he had "something really his own to offer her," he often fled—in fact, he was socially an unstable quantity, though for his very elusiveness greatly in demand. The latest was Mrs. Wharton's note asking him to meet her cousin Nancy from "down south" at a dinner. Therefore, to make good his non-acceptance, he was out of town a few days at this country resort.

Suddenly through the languid noises of the woods came a brisk, steady little patter, louder and clearer, and a great snapping of twigs. He sat up and there flashed toward him a girl, rosy, dark-haired, panting, her rose-colored frock gathered up about her. She rushed almost upon him, breathless anxiety in her face, and crushed herself carefully behind his big tree before she saw him as he rose and stood at attention.

"Oh, hush! she whispered, putting out a hand and drawing him toward her. "Do please lie flat or something so we won't be seen!"

There was real distress in her voice and he obeyed promptly. The look of her would have made a slave of anything masculine. She was breathing hard, and he saw that she had lost one small pump and stood on the other foot to spare her pink silk stockings and a tender sole. She clung to the tree in something like terror.

"I'll—look after you," he ventured in a low tone, lifting his head a bit to look at her. She made a frantic little gesture which flattened him out again.

"Oh—hush!" she breathed again. "He is coming!" She drew herself together in a sort of little bunch, her eyes wide and blue, bluer than eyes have any business to be to go with black hair. Indeed Elwood heard a tremendous crackling, and in a moment a shout, a clear call.

"Who—e-e-e!" And then, "Where are you? Who—e-e-e!" With his khaki clothes, tannish fair hair, and recumbency, Elwood was practically invisible at a distance, so he turned his head a bit and from his knoll saw in the path below a square-set, dark-eyed, determined looking man striding along, and calling at every third stride, "Where are you, Annie?"

The girl was motionless, save that she poked out the pink-stockinged foot and gave Elwood's arm a futile poke. Then she gave herself a little trembling shake.

"If he'd—only—pass us!" she whispered. Her eagerness spread to the young fellow on watch at her feet.

"He'd better!" he muttered in a tone between threat and petition. And—he passed, but not without a cursory glance in their direction which only the protecting tree trunk kept from seeing the girl. In a moment he was crashing on in another direction, his call becoming fainter.

Elwood rose cautiously, and the girl sank to the ground, her feet coiled under her skirt. She spoke as she might have to a brother, and Elwood decided that he would have preferred her to be less friendly. He hoped he did not look too "safe," though, of course, he wished her to have confidence in him.

"He might—come back," she warned anxiously—"and you're so tall! Do sit down!"

"If he does, I should hardly permit him to eat you alive, unless you wished it," he snapped.

"Everybody's cross," she sighed. "But nobody's as cross now as Cousin Mary will be when the—but there, I need a guardian, I think—or a lawyer! It's one of those ridiculous will things," she explained, without enlightening him, "where somebody dies and leaves you money if you marry somebody you just won't marry! He can have auntie's money! I would rather work for a living—than—" she flushed brilliantly. "Work—is self-respecting, I suppose," she said forlornly, looking down at two berlinged little hands which had obviously not even a smattering acquaintance with workaday matters!

"I'm a lawyer, if you need one," commented Elwood a bit drily. "Oh, I could have him arrested for disturbing the peace, if you like."

She caught the humor in his eyes and laughed outright, then clapped her hand over her mouth and listened.

"He—might—come back! I couldn't stand entrusting again!" Then she looked entrancingly at the young man. "You don't suppose you could—find my shoe? It's like this." She thrust out a patent-leather pump. "—could," he answered imperturbably, "but I prefer staying here until you're sure." Her anxiety suddenly left her.

"Oh, he's gone now. He'd have to be to get that last train. Otherwise he'd miss dinner! He'd lose his life before he'd commit an unconventionalality! He wasn't perfectly sure he saw me, anyway, I ran so fast when I saw him coming. He'll think I went in the motor with the Thompson's, and they'll think I went with the Giddings! Everything will be lovely until they all turn up but the guest of honor! Cousin said we were mad to motor out here when we'd have to rush to get dressed. Now she will be wild! There's somebody she wanted me to meet—he was to take me out to dinner. Poor Steve," she sighed, and Elwood knew she meant the man from whom she had hidden. "Poor Steve—thought he'd like it settled before then! You see, he doesn't want the money half as badly as he wants—me." Her tone was demure.

"Naturally," remarked Elwood with conventional complacency. "The girl made a little saucy face at him." "Not naturally," she mocked. "It isn't natural for him to leave his lazy lolling on a southern ranch and chase after a mere girl clear to Rhode Island when most of the other girls back there wouldn't need chasing!"

With a quick, graceful movement she rose, ruefully pulling together a great tear in her skirt.

"Nancy," she adjured herself, "you're an impossible person! You tear your clothes, and lose yourself from your own dinner party, and you sit unchaperoned in the woods with a strange young man who politely tries not to seem shocked and bored."

Elwood laughed and drew her hand under his arm.

"Come, I'll counsel you—and if you'll lean on me we'll find your shoe together, and if you really want to get to that dinner—I can get Fred Holly's motor in ten minutes and take you in. We might be late, but Mrs. Wharton might forgive us."

"(U)" she said with belated and unnecessary hauteur. He stopped and, dropping her arm, took some papers from his pocket. Finally he handed her a monogrammed envelope.

"Oh," she said, recognizing the hand, "oh!"

"That asks—Mr. Elwood Pierce to a dinner for Miss Nancy—Something—"

"Nancy 'Something!'" she said indignantly. "In that case, what were you—doing—out in the woods?"

"What were you doing? Running away?" he mused.

"You—tried to—get away! You—didn't want to meet me—and you—are punished," she chanted joyously, starting briskly down the path. He corrected her.

"I am—everlastingly—happy," he said gravely. "If that happens—which I intend to have happen." He did not finish, but meeting his eyes her own glance sought the ground.

"There's—my shoe!" she called joyously. And as he put it on her foot she said quickly, "Much—might depend on how fast you got me back to cousin Mary's—and up her back stairs. I could dress in ten minutes, at a pinch. Could we make it?"

He pulled out his watch. "I—believe—if you'll trust my driving—that even yet I can give you twenty minutes to make yourself unnecessarily lovely in! Just wait on that bench under the tree. Back in a minute!"

He was off for Fred Holly's car. Haste, and need and excitement made the young man so inarticulate that Holly had hoped he would forgive him for letting him have the car. He tore off, driving at indecent speed.

An hour later, just as dinner was announced, Miss Nancy Mason appeared.

"Nancy," said that lady, "where were you! But you can explain later! Meantime, we are waiting, and this is Elwood Pierce who, for his sins, is to take you in."

Nancy gave him a sidelong glance of great sweetness. "Do you—mind?" she asked, as if she had not seen him before.

"Not in the least," he said gravely. "The pleasure is—perfectly earned, you little hypocrite," he added under his breath, as they fled to their places at table.

What Authors Earn.
Many writers whose annual earnings today run into four figures could tell the time when their yearly take did not rise to $100. Sir A. Conan Doyle failed to reach that amount in his first year, yet for "Rodney Stone" he received $35,000 before it was written, remarks the Dundee Courier.

Stevenson, too, found that his average earnings during the first few years of literary work did not average $250, and George Meredith's record was probably even worse than that. Yet these, like Trollope, came to count the spoils in thousands, as also did Mark Twain who, from desperate beginnings—when he changed his lodgings frequently and bore all his earthly belongings in a cigar box—lived to demand, and receive, $50,000 for a comparatively short story like "Adam's Diary."

Willing to Be Frightened.
They were seated in the dim light of a conservatory. She was playing with her fan, and he was murmuring soft speeches in her ear. Suddenly he leaned forward and impressed a kiss on her soft cheek.

"Oh, Charlie," she cried, "how you frightened me!"

Then after a few minutes she said: "Frighten me again, Charlie."

Why Salves Can't Cure Eczema

Since the old-fashioned theory of curing eczema through the blood has been given up by scientific men, different salves have been tried for years to no avail. It has been found that these salves only clog the pores and cannot penetrate to the inner skin below the epidermis where the eczema germs are located. This is the quality of the salves which probably explains the tremendous success of the well known Blood-Cleaner remedy, oil of wintergreen, thyroid extract, etc., as compounded in D.D.D. Prescription. We have sold other remedies for skin troubles but none that we can recommend as highly as the one for we know that D.D.D. does the job at once. We just want you to try it. That's all. World Shortage of Live Stock
There is a world shortage of live stock, especially cattle. The populations of all civilized nations are growing much faster than the general meat food supply. South American live stock interests are crippled by three successive seasons of drought and "foot and mouth" disease, and the supply of meat animals in the United States has actually declined during the last decade while the population has increased over 21 per cent.
